FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

For the month of October 2017, World Winners' net asset value climbed +3.2%, slightly lower than the index, which gained +4%.

During the past few weeks, we have capitalised on the third quarter's good earnings reports, as well as a buoyant stock market, to divest some longstanding investments. As you know, our philosophy is to buy high-quality, liquid companies that we believe are undervalued and have the potential to grow by more than 50% over a three-year timeframe. As a result, our stock market activity is generally quite limited because we wait until these undervaluations are corrected, following various publications that reflect the progress made by the management teams with their objectives. After being launched 30 months ago, we have renewed around 20% of our portfolio since this summer, investing in 10 new companies (including the first week of November).

Certain companies, which have been held for a number of months and had made strong progress, have been removed from the portfolio to give way to securities with stronger upside potential. For instance, we sold our positions in Alibaba, Tencent and Lee & Man, which had been part of the portfolio since 2015, achieving capital gains ranging from +48% to +119%. On the other end, we initiated new positions, primarily in the retail sector in the US and agrifood in China. The retail sector has been left decimated by investors, who believe that all the players in this sector are bound to disappear as they are faced with the threat posed by Amazon. While we believe that Amazon is clearly driving a major transformation in the market, we also believe that certain firms which have strong brands and a good online presence, will be able to succeed in such an environment. Faced with the market's usual irrational and excessive response, we have been able to buy some companies such as L Brands (Victoria's Secret), American Eagle, Dollar Tree or even Michael Kors for attractive prices.

The benefits of this work are already being seen and you can rest assured that despite achieving a performance of +32.5% since being created, your portfolio still has significant potential for further growth. This is a vital point in understanding your investments. While it is true that strong growth in an index or passive management may undermine future performance, the situation is quite different for an actively managed fund. We work every day to identify companies that offer strong upside potential for you. To achieve this, we have further strengthened our team with the arrival of a new analyst.
