FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

For the month of June 2018, your World Winners fund returned -1.9% vs -0.6% for its benchmark, the MSCI World (€). The S&P 500 index, which seems over-valued to us, is resisting downward market movements, even climbing +0.5% on the month, whereas the HSCEI saw a drop of -7.6% during the same period.

Emerging markets (-4.2% on the month) were penalized by rising tensions between the US and its primary trading partners, more specifically China, which we believe has a high growth potential, and thus represents 20% of your fund. We fundamentally do not see China as a risky market, thanks to its stable currency and stable progress in several aspects of its economy. Our view is clearly not shared by the general public.

We do not believe that Donald Trump wishes is to get into a trade war with China, but rather re-balance commercial powers between the two. President Trump, a mascot of what America's leadership looks like, tends to shock the general public through his words (which most of the time fall into extremes), in order to establish a better bargaining position towards his counterparts. Words left aside, let's take a look at the facts: The Chinese economy is less dependent on exports today, than it was in the past. As a matter of fact, exports represented 20% of GDP in 2017 vs 36% ten years ago... Just like in the US, domestic consumption in China is growing at 10% per year, mainly driving the +6.8% growth we saw both in FY 2017 and 1Q 2018.

Our Chinese stocks, mainly focused on their domestic market, do not export (or export very little) to the US, shielding their results from a potential trade war between the 2 countries. Some of them, taking Li-Ning (Nike's local competitor in China) as an example, could even benefit from a switch to local consumption (vs US products), something we already saw in times of political unease between Japan and China, and later between Korea and China.

It is during such market corrections (we have been through many of them during the past 20 years ...), driven by over-blown investor pessimism, that we usually see bargains arise. For our part, we will be closely monitoring them as they present themselves during the 2018 half-year results and will not hesitate to re-enforce/initiate on high convictions.

We remain positive with respect to the potential of your portfolio, which is composed of growing leaders in their respective markets. While some investors fear market corrections, we cherish them...
