FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

The fund dropped -2.0% in September, even though there were very few result announcements. The MSCI is up +0.6%, driven primarily by oil stocks. We have chosen to exclude oil stocks, in line with our long-term conviction regarding crude prices, which will be negatively affected as the adoption of electric cars picks up significantly.

September also put a stop to the outperformance of high-growth stocks, after years of virtually uninterrupted progress during which managers have paid increasingly high prices for this growth, ignoring any profitability or cash generation criteria. This bubble has been caused by a very low interest rate environment, which has ended up skewing conventional valuation methods by awarding an increasingly high premium for growth.

We are convinced that our investment approach based on fundamental analysis and valuations will see its reputation restored again soon. Today, we can see the first signs of a style shift, which is expected to benefit companies with low valuations and solid fundamentals. The earnings season will be getting underway in October. This could be the catalyst for freeing up hidden value and finally, a reappreciation for certain companies that are not particularly popular, after their good prospects have been reconfirmed. On the other hand, expensive companies that do not report any acceleration could be hit particularly hard. There is a risk of capital loss when you invest in a great company with an expensive valuation.

Our bias for emerging markets and China in particular penalised us again (notably the consumer stocks and ADRs that we are particularly exposed to), but our 10-day trip to China confirmed the relevance of our positioning. This country has very strong potential for independent growth, with clear investment opportunities today in the agri-food, accommodation and internet sectors. Investors have a negative perception of them today, but as highlighted by the investor Saeed Amidi, who has been the driving force behind several American success stories, "big business is in China".

We can draw a parallel between the current situation and the one in 1999-2000. Many value investors were closing their funds or were close to being fired (has been?), while younger investors were recording audacious performance levels by surfing the technology bubble. A few months later, value managers were seen as geniuses. As Mark Twain said, history doesn't repeat itself, but it often rhymes.

We have identified various undervalued companies within the portfolio, which enables us to be confident about your fund's strong upside potential over the medium term. Our trade-offs and strengthening of some positions will pay off.
