FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

Dear investors,

World Winners advanced by 4.2% during the month of June, very slightly underperforming its benchmark index, the MSCI World EUR (+4.3%), even though the gap in performance between value investing and growth investing is at its widest since the beginning of the 2000s. Major growth stocks have continued to perform well, virtually across the board. Similarly, the US market outperformed during the month, and World Winners has little exposure to US equities.

Two factors drove market performance during the month: central bank monetary policy continued to be accommodative, and the market anticipated, rightly so, renewed trade negotiations between China and United States.

Both the Fed and the ECB indicated they might lower interest rates even further, against a background of mixed macroeconomic news and lacklustre world trade. This outlook boosted not only equity and corporate bond markets, but also safe haven investments (government bonds of developed countries and gold).

Your fund's exposure to gold mines (Newmont Goldcorp) has contributed to its performance; they have advanced 25% over the past six months, in euro terms. Stocks with high international exposure, such as FLSmidth, Antofagasta and AP Moller Maersk, performed well, because the market anticipated a truce in the Sino-American trade war. The US government agreed, for the moment, to refrain from imposing additional tariffs on Chinese imports to the United States and to suspend new sanctions against the Chinese technology giant Huawei, while Chinese leaders promised to renew their massive purchases of US agricultural products. World Winners also benefited from the appreciation of other stocks, such as JD.com (+15%) and Cargotec (+13.4%), which remain attractively valued in an environment where cash yields nothing. Conversely, companies such as Wayfair, G4S and Aryzta reported no major news and weighed on the fund's performance.

Our companies should continue to benefit from financing terms that are extraordinary historically but favourable objectively. First-half earnings reports will enliven the market starting July 15th and throughout the summer.

We remain very confident about the valuations of the companies in your portfolio, especially given their leadership, their visibility and the low interest-rate environment, which should continue for some time.

The market is likely to take a shine following any reassuring news about an undervalued company. Stock-picking outside of the major indices might finally come into its own again and enable the portfolio to appreciate significantly in the years to come.

We thank you for the trust you have placed in us.
