FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

During the month, World Winners continued building on its progress, gaining 1.7% in euros, while its benchmark index dropped 0.4% over the period.

The earnings reporting period is coming to an end and overall the results have been good. Analysts are tending to raise their earnings forecasts for 2017, which, considering the attractive levels of valuations on the European and Asian markets, justifies our optimism.

From a macroeconomic perspective, May was affected by a new corruption scandal in Brazil and the downgrade of China's debt by Moody's. While we have very low exposure to Brazil, our investments in China represent nearly 20% of the fund. This news could be worrying for investors, but over the longer term the sustainability of Chinese debt is not being called into question. China's fundamentals seem healthier and its government debt levels are far lower than developed countries! This downgrade may also serve as a warning signal for government leaders to accelerate the transition from the historic model for growth financed through debt and based on export industries to a model for growth driven more by domestic consumption and services.

Globally, macroeconomic fundamentals are still positive and the businesses that have rolled out major restructurings are benefiting from significant operational and financial leverage. Many investors are asking us if it is still the right time to invest in equities. The answer is undeniably YES! The growth recorded since the start of the year has been built around healthy foundations, thanks primarily to the increase in profits and not the expansion of valuation multiples. In addition, valuation levels for equities and particularly value shares are very attractive. Lastly, investors have very low exposure to equities (particularly outside of US equities) and the flow dynamics could easily enable the upturn to continue.

The value management cycle is at its beginning. World Winners has a robust process in place that has successfully proven itself over the past 20 years and a highly experienced management team. This makes it an excellent investment vehicle offering exposure to this buoyant theme to accelerate a portfolio's performance.
